THE DISTILLATION FRAME

THE DISTILLATION FRAME

WHAT IS IT?

The graphic device is an ode to the distillation process. It is inspired by the frame of the NEFT logo and the crossbar from our bespoke typography.

HOW WE USE IT

The device can hold copy or imagery and can be flexed accordingly to provide consistency across touchpoints. See overleaf on how the device is used in application.

WHERE WE USE IT

The frame should only be used once per touchpoint. It can be used as a visual metaphor of distilling the majesty of the Alps into the brand and product.

A SIZE FULL PANEL

A SIZE HALF PANEL

EXTREME VERTICAL

PORTRAIT FULL PANEL

SQUARE

EXTREME HORIZONTAL

Do not change in ratio/proportions.

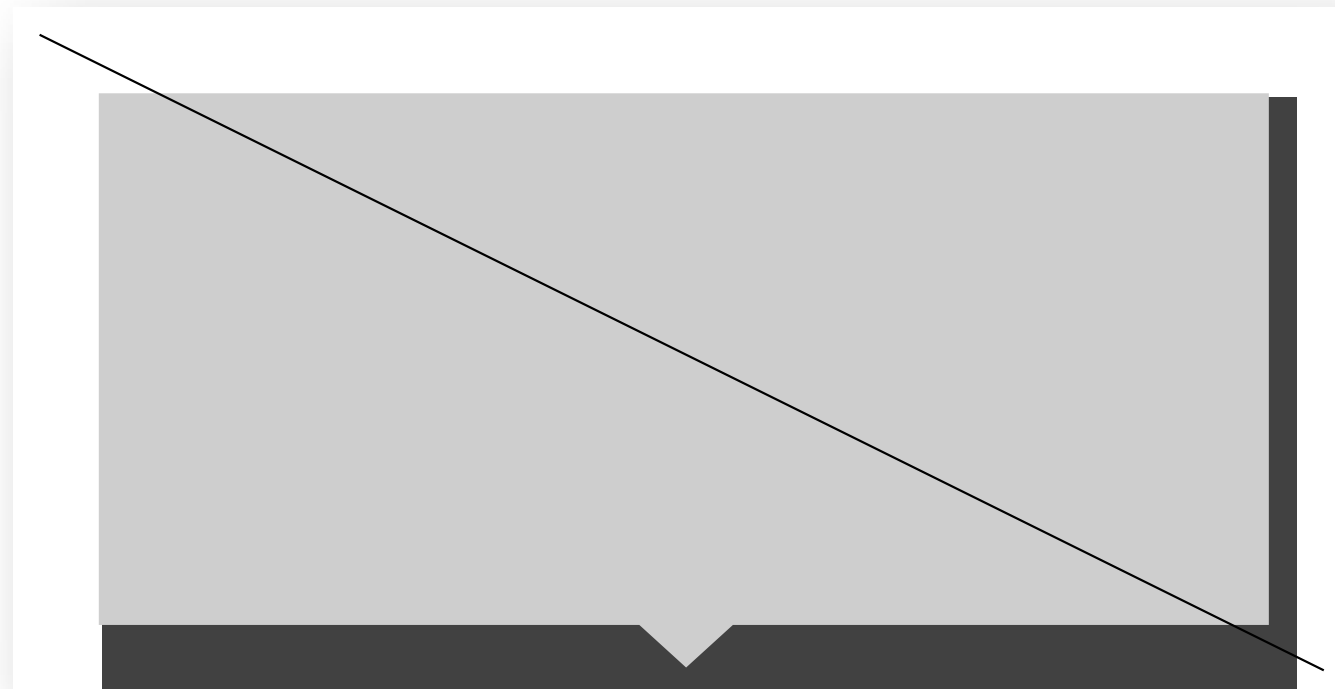

Do not use the funnel asymmetrically.

Do not create an illegible border with imagery/backgrounds (image content should create full boundary).

Do not change the funnel's orientation - should always point downwards.

Do not add effects.

Do not use imagery that doesn't have a downwards trajectory to make sense within the distillation frame.

BRAND COLORS

BRAND COLORS

The brand is predominantly black and white, allowing the Alps to be viewed in all its majesty.

Where possible, subtly integrate the headline type into the imagery.

Where possible, the headline layout should be crafted carefully to be misaligned and give visual interest.

Do not use sentence case for headlines or subheadings.

Do not change the tracking or leading for headlines and sub copy.

Do not use the peaked 'A' multiple times in headlines or in words that aren't in reference to the mountains.

PRODUCT/SERVE

BRAND/LIFESTYLE

DISTILLING THE AWE OF MOUNTAINS INTO OUR IMAGERY

In every area of our photography, we strive to portray the essence of our brand's origins. It should capture the mountain's grandeur in expansive crops loaded with negative space, from out-of-the-ordinary perspectives to simulate NEFT's unique outlook on vodka and those who drink it. Capturing the atmosphere of moving subjects (people, water, clouds, etc.) is integral to building an air of luxury and contemporary atmosphere.

Our primary photography focuses on the majesty of the Alps. This must always be Austrian and is always shown in black and white to dramatize the imagery.

Where possible, we aim to show heroic peaks. We can play with crops and zooms to get into details or pull out wide for full effect.

We can play with micro and macro photography of our core Alpine ingredients. This can be used across seasons. We can play with extreme angles, close ups, and wide shots to add a sense of drama to our shots.

Our premium vodka is so clean and crisp it can be served neat, but also provides a great mixer to extraordinary cocktails.

We can introduce color in our product/serve imagery, but it should feel muted and premium, tonally matching our secondary palette.

We should only use imagery of premium cocktails that hero the cleanness of the vodka. Martinis are a great example. Fruity or brightly colored cocktails should be avoided.

Similar to our product/serve imagery, we can introduce our secondary palette for lifestyle photography.

These should hero our aspirational, entrepreneurial consumer. People should be used sparingly and subtly, and always set in luxury, contemporary environments.

Use extreme angles from interesting perspectives.

Use long exposure shots and cinemagraphs to depict movement/atmosphere.

Use shots that depict opulent details with focused light reflection.

Do not use compositions that do not reflect the true awe and majesty of the mountains.

Do not crop into photography that will lose the overall impact of the shot.

Do not use full color photography in landscape or ingredient content.
